Jaw-dropping villas, slick yachts and magical sunsets – the summer is well and truly here

Green seas

Superyacht construction need not only be slick, it must also have minimum negative impact on the environment. And once the vessel is built, it's important that this eco approach is maintained in the day-to-day operation. Step forward award-winning Danish Yachts, whose latest launch, Project 116 (above), has been put through extensive research and scrutinised at every level, ensuring it is one of the most efficient, and eco-friendly, jet-powered yachts in the world. Project 116 is due to launch this summer – be prepared to be very impressed. danishyachts.com

Keeping watch

If you're after some eye-popping arm candy, check out Bell & Ross's new BR-S Phantom models. The Ceramic Diamonds timepiece, which comes in white or black (right), has a monochrome trim complete with diamonds. As well as looking sophisticated, the watch is water-resistant to a depth of 50m. £3,600, bellross.com

Clockwise from this picture The Artist's Villa in Providenciales, Turks & Caicos; Villa Agave in Dubrovnik, Croatia; Mas Mateu in Girona, Spain

Award nominee Salma Hayek, and a collection of art chosen by Tate Modern director Vicente Todolí. Add to the mix a private beach, cinema, four master bedroom pavilions, a family pavilion (which can sleep four children and a nanny), separate staff accommodation, private infinity pool and yoga area. Oh, not forgetting the uninterrupted views of the Caribbean. You get the picture. From £6,744 per night, maximum 13 guests (amanyaravillas.com). British Airways flies to Providenciales.

Mas Mateu, Spain

For the first time, Mas Mateu, owned by one of Spain's most distinguished families, is available to rent. The £45m property, in the eastern province of Girona, has been restored exquisitely. It sleeps 20, and has an additional staff quarter, a grand salon and a spa, as well as an in-house chef to cater to every whim. For outdoor types, the house is nestled in a sprawling 173-acre forested estate, which comes complete with an equestrian centre, a dedicated swimming pool complex, football pitch, basketball court and tennis court. From £22,300 per week (masmateu.com). British Airways flies to Barcelona.

Villa Giuseppina, Italy

This villa on the shores of Lake Como has recently undergone a multimillion pound transformation. Designers from Milan fashion house Etro have created contemporary-classical chic interiors – there are seven bedrooms in total. There's also an infinity pool, a spa, a Jacuzzi and a fully equipped gym. A fleet of staff is available 24/7 as well as a private Riva boat and chauffeur-driven car for when you want to pop over to nearby Milan for some retail therapy. From £3,128 per week per person based on 14 people sharing (svillas.co.uk). British Airways flies to Milan.

Villa Agave, Croatia

This former private residence of English archaeologist Sir Arthur Evans has been extensively restored to create an exclusive three-bedroom villa. Situated on a cliff above the Adriatic Sea, the house has six terraces (working out at one per guest), with views across to the historic old town of Dubrovnik. The villa is serviced by the nearby Hotel Excelsior and offers use of a private yacht, an outdoor pool and stunning interiors. It's little wonder that Kevin Spacey was one of the first guests to stay there. From £1,069 per night including breakfast (alb.hr/dubrovnik-luxury-villas/villa-agava/dubrovnik-luxury-villa/). British Airways flies to Dubrovnik.

Full house

Staying in a private villa is one of the most luxurious ways to holiday. We round up the flashiest pads available.

The Artist's Villa, Turks & Caicos

This Amanara private villa on Providenciales is truly one of a kind. It has a private recording studio designed by songwriter Nile Rodgers, a film library personally selected by Academy

Art lesson

After last year's success, Master Paintings Week returns to London (3-9 July) and promises once again to bring together the capital's most distinguished names in Old Master galleries and auction houses. Each exhibitor, all in the heart of St James's and Mayfair, will open its doors to special events and displays in their gallery during the week. masterpaintingsweek.co.uk

Perfect scents

If you're after a spot of old-fashioned Hollywood glamour, look no further than Claridge's.
